Sexual assault suspect sought

CRIME Police are on the hunt for a man after an alleged sexual assault on a woman in a Garneau home.

Just after 6 p.m. Tuesday, a woman alone in her home at 80 Avenue and 115 Street answered a knock at her door, to find a large, dark-skinned man on her porch, police say.

Police allege the man pushed his way in, restrained her and demanded cash before forcing her to undress and sexually assaulting her.

The suspect is described as six-foot-three and around 230 pounds.

Local soldier killed

Edmonton-based trooper leaves behind wife, 3-year-old

A bloody week for coalition forces in Kandahar got worse yesterday when a Canadian soldier was killed and two others injured by an improvised explosive device in the ever-hostile Panjwaii district.

Lt. Justin Garrett Boyes, 26, of 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Light Infantry based in Edmonton, was only 10 days into his second tour in Afghanistan when his foot patrol was struck by the blast 20 kilometres southwest of Kandahar city.

Boyes was leading a platoon tasked with mentoring Afghan National Police officers at the time of the explosion. The two other casualties were treated at the Role 3 Hospital at Kandahar Airfield and are listed in good condition.

"So early in the deployment, Justin's death is going to be difficult to accept by his brothers in arms, but will not deter any of us from continuing with our mission," said Brig. Gen. Jonathan Vance, the commander of Task Force Kandahar.

Boyes jumped at the chance to help train Afghan police in order to contribute to the "effort to provide stability to the population so we could, in concert with the Afghan government, extend basic services and humanitarian assistance to those in need," Vance said.

Boyes had only recently joined the Princess Pats as a member of the regular forces after spending six years in the reserves.

His death — the first for Canadian forces in nearly six weeks, and the 132nd since Canada's Afghan mission began in 2002 — darkens what has already been a bleak several days for international forces in Afghanistan.

Vance described Boyes as someone whose Saskatchewan upbringing left an unshakable mark on a family man devoted to his wife, Alanna, and three-year-old son, James.

"He was an easy-going Prairie boy who preferred sitting around the backyard with good friends, his family and a cold drink," Vance said.

Based at the Provincial Reconstruction Team in Kandahar city, Boyes was a member of the Police Operational Mentor and Liaison Team, responsible for professionalizing Afghanistan's rag-tag police units.

Training ANP officers has proved one of the more formidable tasks for Canadian troops in Afghanistan, as the force remains beset by corruption and high desertion rates.

Their vulnerability makes them a favourite insurgent target, and they receive the brunt of Taliban attacks against the government.

Taser didn't kill man:
Finding

VICTORIA HANDYSIDES
victoria.handysides@metronews.ca

PROBE The last chapter of the investigation into Trevor Grimolfson's death has been written, ending with the determination he didn't die from a Tasing, and that two city police won't be charged.

The 38-year-old was Tased three times after assaulting a 70-year-old pawn shop owner and his 30-year-old son in their Stony Plain Road store on Oct. 28, 2008.

Grimolfson died after he was taken into police custody.

A yearlong investigation into his death by the province's police watchdog group has concluded the officers responded appropriately to his "bizarre and aggressive behaviour."

"In my determination, their actions were justified when considering all of the circumstances," Alberta Serious Incident Response Team executive director Clifton Purvis said yesterday.

An autopsy concluded his death was a result of "excited delirium brought on by potentially toxic amounts of ecstasy and ketamine," Purvis said.

The blood-soaked man didn't respond to police direction, and appeared unaffected by pepper spray and three strikes by Tasers, he said.

Howe lends support to tourney

Pro-Am golf event will raise money to combat Alzheimer's disease

Howe Fund for Alzheimer's.

The subject of Alzheimer's is particularly poignant for Howe, as his late wife, Colleen, died from dementia this spring. Also noting that his sister and brother died of the illness, Howe became emotional when speaking about his wife.

"A month ago I could hardly think about it," Howe said.

Gordie Howe was in town yesterday to lend his support to a new charity golf tournament.

"She was instrumental in so many things ... But if she were alive today, I know that she would be really happy with just being here today and hearing that so many wonderful things are happening for those in need."

Howe was jovial while joking about past knee injuries with former-Oiler Mark Napier, now the executive director of the NHL Alumni Association. While Howe "would like to be playing" in the tournament, these injuries prevent him from participating.

"This is an opportunity to take this high profile event ... and really bring the spotlight to Edmonton and its charitable work," said Greg Christensen, a local business leader.

"It's really going to be good long-term for the Alzheimer Society in Northern Alberta."

Former Edmonton police officer faces assault with weapon charge

INCIDENT A former city cop once applauded for bravery has been charged with assault with a weapon, a police watchdog organization revealed yesterday.

Former EPS Const. Rodney Wadden was among a group of officers who entered a residence on Oct. 25, 2006, to arrest an individual. Alberta Serious Incident Response Team executive director Clifton Purvis wouldn't elaborate on the circumstances, but said the events during the arrest led to Wadden being formally charged on Sept. 10. The EPS veteran officer was awarded the Lifesaving Bronze Medal by the force in 2006 after he rescued a trapped driver from a vehicle engulfed in flames. Wadden is no longer employed by the EPS, and now works as a constable in New Brunswick.

H1N1 plan predicts at least 130 deaths

PANDEMIC RESPONSE Alberta Health Services' latest pandemic response plan says 25 per cent of Albertans will get swine flu this fall and winter and 130 to 400 people will die.

The report released earlier this month said the latest data suggests 875,000 people will become infected during this "second wave" of H1N1 in Alberta.

"It is expected Alberta's total hospitalizations will range between 3,800 to as many as 11,400 patients, of whom 15 to 25 per cent will require admission to an intensive care unit," says the plan.

2 men facing drug charges

CANDICE WARD
for Metro Edmonton

Two men have been charged after a routine traffic stop unearthed a substantial amount of drugs with a street value of about $35,000.

In the early morning of Oct. 22, two West Division constables stopped a vehicle speeding through the Westmount Mall parking lot and conducted a vehicle search after finding drugs on the person of one of the men.

"This is a fantastic catch and this will hopefully save someone's life on the street," said Acting Staff Sgt. Alex Hasham.

Hasham credits the find to the good police work of the two constables.

Along with the extensive amount of drugs, including cocaine, methamphetamine, ecstasy, oxycontin and marijuana, a loaded handgun was also seized from the vehicle.

Police have been investigating the possibility of gang involvement but were unable to comment on the subject.

Both men were previously known to police.

Michael Christopher Carey, 33, is charged with three counts of possession of a controlled substance for the purpose of trafficking; possession of a controlled substance; careless storage of a firearm; unauthorized possession of a firearm; knowingly being in possession of an unauthorized firearm; unauthorized possession of a firearm in a motor vehicle; possession of a firearm contrary to a prohibition order; and possession of a loaded prohibited firearm.

Michael Evan Parent, 37, is charged with four counts of possession of a controlled substance for the purpose of trafficking and possession of a controlled substance.

Docs slow with shots

Family MDs say obstacles deterring distribution

Family doctors in some parts of Canada have been slow to sign up to deliver H1N1 vaccine to their patients, pointing to a number of obstacles they say are discouraging them from giving the shots.

In Ontario, a requirement that doctors' offices order vaccine in 500-dose lots is deterring some. Others objected to an initial demand that they sign a contract and provide a weekly line listing for every dose delivered — unnecessary paperwork at a time when everyone is pressed for time, critics say.

"Some people think it's money. I don't think it's about money," said Dr. Doug Mark, a general practitioner and president of the grassroots Coalition of Family Physicians of On-family physicians," said Dr. Joel Kettner, Manitoba's chief medical officer of health.

In some provinces where family physicians are part of the rollout, some of the obstacles identified by Ontario physicians have been taken care of. In British Columbia, for instance, provincial health authorities are breaking up the 500-dose lots into smaller batches so doctors can order only what they need.

Grits look to savvy handler

POLITICS Liberals are looking to veteran political handler Peter Donolo to come up with a strategy to restore the sense of momentum the federal party has seen disappear in the past several months under Michael Ignatieff.

Donolo, a 50-year-old Toronto communications specialist and former mouthpiece for prime minister Jean Chrétien, will arrive in Ottawa at the end of this week to begin the salvage job on the Liberal leader's floundering inner office operation.

Heeding advice that has been heard in Liberal circles for months, Ignatieff is installing Donolo as chief of staff in place of well-liked but inexperienced loyalist Ian Davey.

Liberal MPs, who have recently watched their poll standing nosedive, expressed relief at the prospect of having a seasoned person at the controls in the OLO, as the office of the leader of the opposition is known.

PM plans visit to India, China

Prime Minister Stephen Harper may be the victor in the political race to reach Asia.

Harper announced yesterday he will make official trips to both India and China over the next two months, after years of criticism that he has neglected two massive markets for Canadian trade.

The government has been setting the stage for Harper's eventual visit to the two countries with a flurry of ministerial trips, trade deals and joint initiatives on various issues.

Harper visits India Nov. 16-18, after attending the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation meetings in Singapore. He will visit China Dec. 2-6.

Relations between Ottawa and Beijing have been strained under Harper's tenure. In 2006, ahead of an APEC summit in Vietnam, the prime minister vowed to reporters that he would make human rights the central thrust of a planned meeting with Chi-

Tougher emissions targets needed: Poll

ENVIRONMENT Rich countries such as Canada need to commit to aggressive new targets to curb global warming, regardless of what less developed nations do, say a majority of respondents to a new poll.

The Canadian Press Harris-Decima survey suggests voters may be ahead of the Conservative government when it comes to negotiating a new global treaty on climate change.

By a two-to-one margin, respondents said they believed Canada and the U.S. have a responsibility "to set higher and harder targets" for greenhouse-gas reductions than "fast-growing" countries such as China and India.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper and his ministers have consistently argued that the Kyoto Protocol was seriously flawed and that the next global agreement must include all developing nations to be effective.

Fifty-six per cent of the more than 1,000 Canadians surveyed don't believe Canada's approach to climate change is ambitious or aggressive enough.

Couples and their 'stuff'

RelatingSteve Collins

metronews.ca/collins

It's not the most romantic of impulses, but the economic cold snap of the past year has increased the temptation for couples to huddle together and split the rent.

It seems like a good idea on the face of it, taking the relationship to that mythic "next level," simplifying the logistics of life and all that. There is, however, the matter of your respective baggage, and here I refer only to the physical stuff. Two peoples' possessions must somehow be combined into one place.

George Carlin famously pointed out that a house is nothing but a place to keep your stuff. He also noted that while your stuff is simply called "stuff," someone else's is generally referred to with one of his (pre-HBO) Seven Words You Can Never Say On Television.

This distinction is much on my mind now, here in the middle of Operation Shack-Up. A stack of boxes packed with deferred decisions looms in our bedroom. We have earnest conversations about shelving and storage. I worry about resentment of my stuff growing into resentment of me.

I have many unspoken questions. Where are we going to keep all my CDs? (And why, as an adult male, do I own so many friggin' CDs?)

The accumulated detritus of two lives will always take up too much space and threaten the domestic peace. We're both what are vaguely called "knowledge workers." In practice, it means we've got more books than shelves, and our living room, with three computers, now slightly resembles a call centre.

As a veteran of many moves and many apartments, the solution, when in doubt, is to pitch it out. Every time you move, you must justify lug- ging that box of old magazines one more time or finally give it the heave.

Mercifully, last weekend was Give Away Weekend in Ottawa, when the citizenry are encouraged to put their "gems" and "treas-sures" out on the curb to see if anyone else wants them. Reduce, reuse, unload your crap on the unsuspecting. Good stuff.

Somewhat, though, amidst all this out-with-the-old, you absurdly end up shopping for new stuff, joining all those glum, strained couples at Ikea in navigating that fiendishly designed Swedish merchandise maze for more clutter.

All these stuff-related trials, though, can perhaps be seen as tests of your ability to compromise, revealing either what junk you're willing to live with, or what prized possessions you're willing to throw away, in order to be together.

Steve Collins offers his best guesses on relationships for Metro every two weeks.

Trick-or-treat, smell my feet not good manners

Trick-or-treaters beware: Manners count — even on Halloween. Britain's authority on etiquette, Debrett's, issued its first guidance yesterday on how to behave during the über-North American holiday.

Common questions are: Is it acceptable not to open one's doors to trick-or-treaters? How many times should children be allowed to ring a door bell before moving on? And can one forgo a Halloween costume at a party?

Debrett's has posted its advice to the etiquette-challenged on its website (debretts.com).

No mercy for women, children

Car bomb kills 105 in market

Carnage and grief visited Pakistan yet again yesterday as a car bomb devastated a busy market.

One hundred and five people — mostly women and children — were killed and more than 200 wounded in Peshawar.

The blast destroyed buildings and a mosque, and set scores of shops ablaze in the Mina Bazaar.

The wounded sat amid debris and body parts.

"There was a deafening sound and I was like a blind man for a few minutes," said Mohammad Usman. "I heard women and children crying and started to help others."

"There was the smell of human flesh in the air."

Crying out for help, men tried to pull sur-

A two-storey building collapsed as firefighters doused it with water, triggering more panic.

The government blamed Islamic militants seeking to avenge an army offensive — and visiting U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton pledged support.

"I want you to know this fight is not Pakistan's alone," she said.

Merchants slam Visa auto-enrol debit plan

Tens of thousands of merchants and small business owners have received letters from the country's largest payment processor advising them they will be automatically enrolled in the new Visa debit program unless they take action to opt out.

Small business leaders are outraged and likened the tactic to negative optioning, saying it is one of several complaints they're hearing about the way the new Visa product is being introduced into Canada's $168-billion debit market.

Solutions advising them the new micro-chip enabled payment terminals the merchants had installed were also equipped to handle Visa debit. The merchant is then asked to call or go online to decline the new service.

"These seem like incredibly murky and unfair business practices," said Dan Kelly, vice-president with the Canadian Federation of Independent Business.

Kelly is referring to a letter some of his members received from Moneris Social Solutions, which is advising merchants to accept the new service.

H1N1 not a problem for Oilers' Smid

Many Edmonton players battling flu-like symptoms

The Edmonton Oilers have been riddled by the flu, but defenceman Ladislav Smid, the lone member of the team to test positive for the H1N1 variety of the virus, hasn't been the hardest hit.

Smid, as the Oilers announced late Tuesday, tested positive for H1N1, but the 23-year-old defenceman didn't miss a game and was back on his skates after two days of rest.

Gilbert Brule, meanwhile, one of a half-dozen Oilers players laid low by the flu, was bed-ridden with a non-H1N1 variety of it and missed three games. Results for Brule, the only other Oiler tested for H1N1, came back negative.

"I guess I got lucky and it didn't hit me that bad," said Smid, who began feeling ill Oct. 20. "I stayed home with a fever."

"Outside of a fever for a day-and-a-half, I felt better on the game day (Oct. 22 against Columbus) so I tried to skate in the morning and I felt good enough to play so I played."

In the past 10 days, Ales Hemsky, Dustin Penner, Mike Comrie, Denis Grebeshkov, Brule and Smid suffered a variety of flu-like symptoms. Brule missed three games, Comrie two and Hemsky one.

Lubomir Visnovsky, who is Smid's defensive partner and sits next to him in the dressing room, didn't play late in the loss to the Avalanche after taking ill. He didn't practise yesterday. Visnovsky will become the third Oiler tested for H1N1.

The Oilers are taking the same precautions that have been laid out for the public by Alberta Health. They aren't sharing water bottles. Players showing symptoms of the flu are asked to stay home and away from the rink.

Eskimos' Lumsden hoping to represent Canada at Olympics

BOBSLEIGH Jesse Lumsden may be joining Canada's bobsleigh team when the Edmonton Eskimos' season ends.

The star running back says the shoulder injury that ended his Canadian Football League season won't stop him from chasing a spot on the Olympic bobsleigh team.

Lumsden, 27, dislocated his left shoulder in July required surgery. He says he Lumsden is six-foot-two and 226 pounds and has been clocked at 4.4 seconds in the 40-yard dash.

He served as brakeman for former Olympic and world champion pilot Pierre Lueders at the Canadian championship on Whistler's Olympic track in March. They won the national title in the two-man event together.

It's big work for a little nook

EMMA YARDLEY
for Metro Canada

A kitchen nook may be small but it has a big job to do; it has to provide all the storage and cooking areas of a regular-sized kitchen in half the space.

For starters, try fixing a rack and rail system to the wall for frequently used utensils and choosing a drying board that fits above the sink.

"Both of those options save counter space, when it is at a premium," says Tamara Robbins Griffith, interior designer, regular guest expert on CityLine, and design spokesperson for Ikea Canada.

"Choose accessories that make a statement. Since there isn't tons of room for unnecessary objects, the ones you choose should 'work hard,' in both design and function."

Her number one piece of advice though is installing floor-to-ceiling cabinetry with pullout pot drawer with dividers for all your cookware. While function is the name of the game you can still have fun with your space.

"I love incorporating some softness, and textiles with pattern and colour. Kitchens tend to have a lot of hard surfaces ... bring on some whimsy when it comes to window treatments, banquette cushions, and table linens."

Impress the kids with last-minute spooktacular styling tips

HomeScape

Sylvia Putz

metronews.ca/homescape

Halloween will be upon us very shortly, and depending on your neighbourhood, hundreds of ghouls and goblins will soon be knocking upon your creaky door.

First of all, buy candy. Then you'd better get busy decorating because parents and kids are very choosy today. They only go to the houses that are decorated, and if your house doesn't make the A-list, they'll just go sailing by, leaving you to gorge on your goodies in wretched (but yummy) isolation.

Second of all, concentrate on the front door, and on pulling in those trick-or-treaters. The first requirement is light.

You'd think low lighting would be spooky, but in fact, what you are looking for is lighting that attracts and says, "Come to my haunted home and I'll give you candy, and maybe a couple of chills along the way."

Lots of weird and spooky lighting is definitely good, but nothing overly bright.

Cover the porch light with a ghost-like gauzy sheet. Then consider pulling out your holiday lights to light up your pumpkins. Forget the pumpkin disembowlement for this year (messy and time-consuming), and draw or paint on faces instead. Then wrap holiday lights in red, orange, white or black fabric and place them around pumpkins to produce a wonderfully spooky effect.

To fill it out a little more, use a few props on the front porch or near the door. Along with pumpkins and perhaps a few gourds or corn stalks, a scarecrow fashioned of old clothes stuffed with crumpled newspaper is wonderfully easy to put together with things you have at home.

If you prefer another theme, you might also consider making your porch into a giant spider's lair. You can buy the webbing very cheaply at a dollar store, and you might fashion large spiders from black balloons or garbage bags stuffed with paper, and add legs and red eyes."

bags stuffed with paper, and add legs and red eyes. You can add silk-covered "prey" to the spider web if you wish.

I also enjoy the idea of a wreath of black flowers on the front door. These can be made by hand of construction paper, or you may buy fabric flowers and have the kids colour them black with magic marker.

And how about installing a deceased "lady" in a black dress seated beside the door with a bouquet of black roses? Again, old clothing stuffed with newspapers is brilliant.

Other themes will work too of course, like the graveyard with cardboard gravestones, or a convention of ghosts made of sheets draped over balloons, tied up under the head and hung from trees, for example.

Presto, you're ready just in time. Have a great Halloween!

After decades of hiding in the shadows of buns and bouffants, the plain-Jane bobby pin enjoyed the spotlight on the runways this fall. At Donna Karan, they created an abstract pattern that surrounded the models' sleek chignons, and Orlando Pita played with a stack of bronze-hued pins to decorate the ladylike buns seen at Carolina Herrera.

This Is It gives raw glimpse

Michael Jackson's This Is It

Director: Kenny Ortega
Star: Michael Jackson
Classification: PG
Rating:

IAN GORMELY
for Metro Canada

It's ironic that the final creative project from a performer who spent his entire career striving for polished perfection would be something this raw.

Originally intended as filler for a 3-D concert film of Michael Jackson's UK comeback shows, This Is It was pieced together by director and longtime Jackson collaborator Kenny Ortega from footage shot during the four months of rehearsals leading up to Jackson's death in June.

Jackson hits the stage during rehearsals for his comeback shows.

It tracks the star from the press conference announcing the shows, through dancer tryouts, band rehearsals and video shoots, interspersed with rehearsal performances of Jackson's biggest hits.

As the film opens with Wanna Be Startin' Some- thin', it's almost shocking to see Jackson doing what he does best: singing and dancing. Having not played a show in a decade, the King of Pop has offered up nothing to balance out his tabloid lifestyle.

Even more shocking is seeing how fierce a dancer Jackson remained until the end, frequently upstaging dancers half his age.

The film's best segments come from scenes where Ortega uses split screens to contrast a song's evolution over the course of the rehearsals, particularly on Human Nature and The Way You Make Me Feel.

While the film's first 45 minutes are absolutely thrilling, giving a rare glimpse of Jackson's creative process, it loses steam two-thirds of the way through.

What comes across is Jackson's active participation in the creation of these shows. The film's best moments capture him directing the band or dancers, tweaking their performances to meet his high expectations (despite the fact that he's surrounded by yes-men, he is a creative genius).

And based on the footage, the London shows would have been spectacular. But This Is It feels more like the greatest DVD bonus feature than a feature film.

Tegan & Sara

Album: Sainthood
Label: Sire/Warner
Rating:

WHILE SAINTHOOD IS Tegan and Sara's sixth record, it's only recently that they've become the go to team for angst girl-fronted power pop. Their latest picks up where The Con left off — infectious and energetic punk-light tunes. These tracks mostly deal with love — they discuss their parents' divorce and their own break-ups — it's intense stuff. Musically, the twins don't depart much from their formula, but they have added more electronic and experimental flourishes, and the songs are tighter than ever. It's another step in the right direction.

Twilight: New Moon

Album: Various Artists
Label: Atlantic/Warner
Rating:

THERE'S NO DOUBT Twilight: New Moon will be a huge hit. But expect the soundtrack to top the charts too. With the likes of Death Cab For Cutie, Thom Yorke and Lykke Li penning exclusive tracks for the disc, it's no wonder that this is easily the best movie-related record of the year. Nearly every song is worth listening to on repeat, but standouts include Anya Marina's soft Satellite Heart and Grizzly Bear's haunting Slow Life. Even the Killers turn in a solid performance on A White Demon Love Song. This is a must have for every indie rock fan.

Poe: Last Days of the Raven

Brent Fidler ("First Wave") is writer, director, producer and star of this dreamy, often surreal biography of writer Edgar Allan Poe. As he lies on his deathbed, flashbacks tell the story of his life and the events — including the deaths of multiple loved ones — that shaped his writing. A sequence set in the present has an actor playing Poe onstage and discovering a psychic connection to the man. Mackenzie Gray and Emily Tennant also star. 7 PM on BRAVO

The Office

In a special Halloween episode, the office staff plans a haunted house for children in the community, but it's nothing compared to the splash that Michael (Steve Carell) makes at an important business meeting when he falls into a small fishpond. Pam and Andy (Jenna Fischer, Ed Helms) try to drum up more sales by cold-calling. Rainn Wilson and John Krasinski also star in the new episode "Koi Pond." 10 PM on CITV KHO

A tempting array of sandwiches, salads and desserts occupy Refresh Organic Bistro's cooler. I browsed the day's (mostly gluten-free) menu before I placed my order. We took a seat at one of the tiny tables and I waited for my Rooibos tea ($2) to steep.

My borsch and chicken salad sandwich ($12) were delivered immediately: I attacked the beet soup first. A mound of veggies, dyed scarlet by the beets, emerged from the succulent broth. Caramelized onions sweetened every spoonful.

I turned next to my dusty kaiser roll. Chill chunks of chicken rolled over my tongue on a wave of fresh cilantro. The bun was a little chewy, but my mouth was too full to complain. I finished with a strange power cookie ($2), possibly made with molasses and birdseed. It did nothing to diminish my delight.

3. Reserve about 1/3 of the mixture into another bowl.

4. Put the chicken in the large bowl with the cooled marmalade mixture. Massage and rub marinade into chicken (over and under the skin and everywhere you can get it).

5. Line a baking pan with foil. Arrange chicken on the baking pan, removing excess marinade, if any. Bake for 15 mins. Remove from oven and glaze (in a thick layer) with set aside mixture. Bake for another 10-13 minutes or until the juices run clear, glazing at least once more.
